How Would You Like to Save $100 a Year?

Homestead Exemption Filing Deadline March 15th

“You can save money on your property taxes if you apply for a HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION. The savings are around $100 a year, but you have to file before March 15th and meet the qualifications,” according to Oklahoma County Assessor Larry Stein.

“In Oklahoma County if you lived in your home on January 1st of 2019 and it’s your primary residence, then you may be eligible for a Homestead Exemption. The Homestead Exemption provides an exemption of the first $1,000 of assessed value and after the calculations, and depending on your tax rate, a Homestead Exemption can save you $100 or more each year,” Stein said.

“You can print and apply for the Homestead Exemption from the Oklahoma County Assessor’s internationally recognized and award winning website. If you need the form mailed to you, please contact the office at (405) 713-1236,” Stein said.

“For those 65 and older, you can also apply for the Assessment Freeze if you earn less than $69,400 which is the Median Family income for a family of four according to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). If you currently have a homestead, you can apply for the Senior Freeze on that form when you receive the Homestead Receipt this coming year, or the application is available online.

Property taxes in Oklahoma are among the lowest in the nation. Depending on the location, Texas property taxes can be more than double Oklahoma’s, and New Jersey’s property taxes can be more than four times Oklahoma County’s for the same value of property.
